Our Insurers

Issue 3

Why is an insurer's financial rating important to you and your client when deciding between different insurance carriers? Well, for one it's a way to subjectively determine an insurance organisation's financial strength. Or to put it another way, its ability to pay claims. To obtain a financial rating, an insurer must go through a comprehensive evaluation by an independent third party, such as AM Best, Standard & Poor's or Moody's to name a few.

The importance of a financially stable insurance company has never been more critical. In the UK we have seen the failure of a growing number of rated and unrated insurers. Poor liquidity, under-pricing, under-reserving, and management and governance issues are among the main recurring issues.

We at Commercial Express appreciate how important working with the right insurer is to our agents. We need to ensure you have the confidence to recommend our products to your clients. The following document sets out the financial strength of our carriers and which products they underwrite.
