Claims examples

- An apprentice at the insured's wholesale business announced she was pregnant a few weeks after starting her one-year contract. Shortly after, the insured lost two senior members of staff and was unable to replace them. As the insured found themselves unable to train her, in agreement with ACAS and the training academy, they agreed to suspend the training agreement and the academy would place her elsewhere. When the apprentice turned down another offer, the claimant's mother alleged that her daughter had been dismissed due to her pregnancy and proceedings were issued. The claimant submitted a Schedule of Loss amounting to £51,779 as she was at that stage a litigant in person. With mounting legal costs and a much-reduced schedule later submitted, settlement was eventually agreed at judicial mediation for £12,000, legal costs of £20,772 were paid by ARAG.
- Our insured ran a wholesaler specialising in children's clothing and shoes. They were having problems with one of the warehouses in Portugal that were not fulfilling orders or shipping them out late. This resulted in complaints on social media and loss of income due to all the refunds they were having to make. ARAG appointed solicitors assessed that she had a strong case. Portuguese lawyers were instructed and proceedings issued. It was a complex commercial case and was very document heavy. At a preliminary hearing, solicitors were able to achieve settlement which was their main objective. The full £30,000 was paid and the legal cost of £7,622 were paid by ARAG.
